

March 30, 2013 Let's Discuss It – Next meeting April 27, 2013

(notice: the May 25th LDI may be cancelled if there's rain on the previous weekend – Germantown Historical activity)

What I remembered this week: Couldn't find a name in ancestry.com on the census (even using wildcards). I went to familysearch.org and it used more of a soundex approach and found the person (Hudgens was listed as Higgins). Use multiple methods and sites to find what you need. Because you didn't find it on one doesn't mean it doesn't exist. The familysearch site sent me to the scanned image on ancestry. I found a marriage record on ancestry and the scanned image on familysearch.

Apps I downloaded and tried this month:

Wolfcoders screen snag (listed later);
Feedly (listed later) (google reader replacement);
Calme (printed calendar).
Desktop timer (listed later);
NetVibes (listed later) (an iGoogle replacement).

Read that not only is iGoogle going away, but Google Reader is going away this year. Darn.

Looking for a link from one of our previous handouts?

Remember there is an index (I update it ALMOST yearly(!) on <http://www.tngs.org> under the Let's Discuss It category.

These two links were presented at the last meeting but were not put on the handout:

PZ sent this link – users voted for best genealogy sites: http://genealogy.about.com/od/best\_of/tp/readers-choice-2013.htm

This happens to be a Wisconsin link, but it's a reminder to check Cyndi's list more often. This group has photographed ALL cemeteries in this county. Many places are doing the same thing, and if you don't look often, you'll miss some great resources.
